I am a hard-working individual. I look to be very consistent with the quality of my work and thrive in large environments. I have had work exposure in different geographical regions with highly reputed companies. As a Graduate of the London School of Economics & Political Science (LSE), I am willing to experiment working in different roles, with the aim of allowing these experiences to widen my horizons and enrich my learning. I am particularly interested in capital markets, as this allows me to combine the skills I have learnt over the course of my degree with an interest in finance.
